Tribal ExposureEvent: Awareness on Tribal Lifestyle*Date: 17th September, 2022

Andhra Loyola Institute of Engineering and Technology (ALIET) students experienced the tribal culture and their way of living on 17th September, 2022. The twenty students along with three staff members reached Katukapally, Chintoor Mandal, East Gadavari district, Andhra Pradesh. It is a hilly region covered with thick forests and hillocks. The students were happy to identify themselves with koyas, Kondareddies, Gothikoyas and Naiks of this area. They surprised to see their houses with bamboo frames plastered with mud as walls with hatched roofing. The life style of these various tribal groups opened the eyes of the students to feel one with them and also to work for their welfare in future in one way or the other. The participants of this exposure visit were given a short orientation by Fr. Yesurathnam, director of Loyola Integrated Tribal Development Society (LITDS), Katukapally. Then the groups were divided for a field visit to the tribal villages along with the village animators.

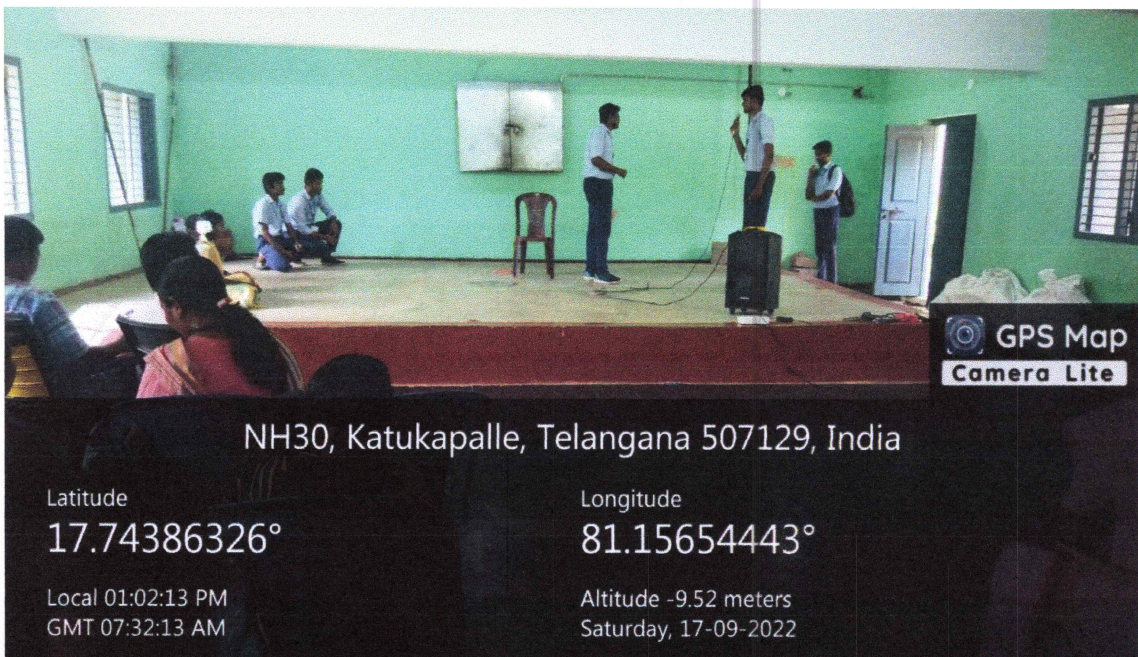

The participants were really shocked to walk to the villages for about an hour and half in the rain in the midst of thick forest, where there is no road and the area covered only with thorny bushes and trees. They had a great experience of interacting with the tribals in the villages and had enriching experience of observing the poor and pathetic conditions of the unknown and unnoticed tribes even after the seventy five years of Independence of our mother land. The participants

Francis Xavier along with a few faculty members for their sudden visit us in that tribal area. The management of ALIET were very happy to distribute gifts to the school going children in this thick forest and we were so grateful to LITDS for providing this great opportunity to learn and to be with tribals. The students also were so happy and grateful to their institution for giving them this enriching experience.
